Now showing in our COSTUME SALON.

The German's last stand.

The Germans thrust southward towards Gravenhurst, every forward yard was bought by counter-attack.

Sir Douglas Haig reported late on Saturday night that the battle near Cambrai was still in progress.

The enemy's intention was, he says, to disrupt the enveloping attack with a large number of divisions.

A captured order declared: "We are now going to turn the British embryonic victory into a real one."

Field-marshal Haig says: "Owing to our magnificent defence and stubborn resistance the enemy's objective was defeated."

He forced a way through lines on a canister and shell of Crecy and captured a number of prisoners.

Our reserves counter-attacked and captured the greater part of the ground lost.

We inflicted heavy losses and took several hundred prisoners.

The latest accounts show that all the enemy's counter-attacks were repulsed.

A German official report on Friday stated:

"New struggles have developed on the Cambrai battlefield, and we are far in our favour."

FOR AUSTRALIA.

Addressing the shareholders of the Bank of New South Wales on the problems arising out of the war Sir Charles Macellar, the president of the bank, emphasised the necessity of prudence and restraint in business and financial affairs.

He said:

"We must not vote because this is what we think."

These are the arguments to be considered, not the events of the last few days, which have divided the nation still more bitterly than before.

We must take some present advantage against the risk of his action in doing so resulting in future ruin. He takes the foolish risk if he votes 'No'.

ON "OUR DAY" for the British Red Cross workers of Australia—one who for three years had laboured incessantly and lovingly for the sick and wounded soldiers of this country. It is not too much to say that the death of Mrs. Langer Owen, like that of Dr. Elizabeth Garrett Anderson, founder of the Legislative Assembly (Mr. J. C. Carruthers), the first woman member of the State Parliament, was a blow to us all.

Her loss will be deeply felt by all who have been associated with her in the work of the Red Cross.

She had done much for the Red Cross movement in New South Wales, and had done magnificent work. It might reasonably be suggested that the British Red Cross Society did not give her the credit she deserved.

BIG ENEMY ATTACK

NEAR CAMBRAI

OBJECT FAILS

SMALL GAINS COST FOE DEAR

LONDON, Dec. 2.—A United Press message on Friday night states:—The Germans launched a very heavy counter-attack on the Cambrai battlefield, between Montreuil and Bourlon. Prince Rupprecht, having been out-generaled by Sir John Byng, decided to put every available German life in the balance in an effort to regain some, if not all, of the newly-won ground, likewise some of his lost prestige.

The blow, perhaps, was the hardest struck by the Germans since that at Verdun in February, 1916.

Vast masses charged into the teeth of the British machine gun fire, while artillery filled fields with the mangled punks of the Crown Prince. The Germans thrust southward, towards Grancourt. Every forward yard was bought by countless dead. It was manifest that Prince Rupprecht's pride would not allow General Byng to retain his winnings if the Germans were able to re-take them.

Meanwhile, the British infantry vigorously counter-attacked.

A New York message on Saturday said news had been received of a British retreat near Cambrai, in which prisoners were lost.

OFFICIAL REPORTS.

Sir Douglas Haig's midnight report on Friday stated:—After a violent bombardment, the enemy, with strong forces, at 8 o'clock this morning attacked on a wide front, southward of Cambrai, between Vendhuile and north of Gheluvelt. We repulsed all attacks on both sides of Banteux, and captured Gonnelieu, and Villers-Guislain. The enemy's counter-attacks at Gouzeaucourt collapsed.

We captured 4000 prisoners and several batteries.

A German official message on Friday afternoon stated:—Most violent artillery activity is manifested on both sides of Puchemelle and north of Gheluvelt. We repelled an English attack west of Bourlon.

FRENCH FRONT.

A French communiqué issued on Friday afternoon stated:—After a series of violent bombardments in the region of Les Cambles, the enemy carried out an important raid, which completely failed.

A French communiqué on Friday night reported that the artillery was fairly active north of Chemin-des-Dames and on the right of the Meuse.

A French communiqué on Saturday afternoon stated:—The artillery duel increased on the right bank of the Meuse, and in the Beaumont-Bouleau Châlonne.

It was followed by a violent attack on positions north of Bois-d'Osse.

The assailants were driven back, after lively fighting, our line being entirely maintained.

A French communiqué on Saturday night reported violent artillery actions in the St. Quentin region, and south of Juvigny.

On the right of the Meuse we repulsed an enemy coup-de-main north west of Rezonvau.

THE GERMAN EFFORT.

Mr. Philip Gibbs writes: There was a violent German bombardment on Friday morning. Many gas shells preceded an elaborate assault on Bourlon Wood, which was repulsed, and arrested heavily.

The Germans have accepted General Byng's challenge for open warfare, which our men prefer. These battles will be a great opportunity for generality.

The correspondent of the United Press Association, telegraphing on Friday, stated:—The enemy did not attempt to renew last night, their principal attack on the Cambrai battlefield. We successfully repelled local attacks southward of Vendhuile.

Hostile activity was active in the Scarpe Valley.

We drove off three attempted raids last night, southward of La Bassée, and carried out two successful raids in the neighbourhood of Waziers.

Sir Douglas Haig's midnight communiqué on Saturday stated: Reports from various sectors of the Cambrai battle front, with captured orders and objective maps, enable the following account to be given of the battle, which commenced yesterday morning, and is still progressing.

The enemy's intention was to deliver a simultaneous encircling attack with a large number of divisions, and drive us out of the positions gained on November 20. General Von der Marwitz, commanding the Second German Army, issued on November 29 the following order:—"The English, throwing into the fight countless tanks on November 20, gained victory near Cambrai. Their intention was to break through. They did not succeed, thanks to the brilliant resistance of the troops put into the line to check their advance. We are now going to turn their embryonic victory into a defeat by an encircling counter-attack."

Owing to the magnificent defence and stubborn resistance of our troops the enemy's object was completely defeated.

The enemy advanced in masses from Vendhuile to a point two kilometres westward of Moerbeke, endeavouring to break through by weight of numbers. From Moerbeke our positions are intact. Artillery, rifle, and machine-gun fire inflicted the severest losses on the enemy. Where he temporarily broke through, he was caught by the point blank fire of field artillery and driven back by immediate counter-attacks.

The enemy forced his way into our lines on a considerable front southward of Crevecoeur, capturing a number of prisoners and reaching our gun positions in places. Our reserves by a counter-attack recaptured a great part of the ground, and to-day retook Gonnelieu and the St. Quentin spur, southward thereof.

We took several hundred prisoners in these operations, and many machine guns, and inflicted heavy losses.

The enemy this afternoon made repeated attacks in the neighbourhood of Moerbeke, Maroelincourt, Fontaine, Bourlon, and Moerbeke. Present reports show that he was completely repulsed.

We captured during November 11,551 prisoners, including 214 officers; and 138 guns, including 40 heavy, 300 machine guns, and 100 trench mortars; also great quantities of engineering stores, ammunition, and war material.

Sir Douglas Haig, reporting at noon on Friday, stated:—We drove off raiders last evening near Gavrelle. Enemy artillery is active south-west and west of Cambrai, also eastward of Ypres.

Reporting on aviation work, Sir Douglas Haig states:—Low-fliers on Thursday fired several thousand rounds at the enemy's infantry, and 180 bombs were dropped on a large dump northward of Cambrai, on Roulers railway station, and billets in the battle area. Enemy aircraft were very active. We brought down six, and drove down two. Three of ours are missing.

Sir Douglas Haig's latest aviation report says: The clouds were at a height of 2000 feet yesterday (Friday), but our aeroplanes continuously co-operated with other arms in counter-attacking south-west of Cambrai. Our artillery machines reported over 200 enemy targets. Bombing machines dropped over 200 bombs on troops and transport in villages at the rear of the battle. Scouting machines fired over 15,000 machine-guns rounds on troops and transport moving behind the fighting.

Air-fighting was very severe, and resulted greatly in our favour. Fifteen hostile machines were brought down, and three driven down. Seven of ours are missing.

GERMANS CLAIM 4000 PRISONERS.

(Admiralty—Per Wireless Press.)

A German official report on Friday evening stated:—New struggles have developed on the Cambrai battlefield, and are so far in our favour.

A German official report on Saturday afternoon stated:—The battle near Cambrai broke out with great violence. Our counter-attacks for the improvement of our positions met with complete success. We threw back the enemy on Grancourt, Annoeux, and Cantaloup. We stormed heights on both sides of Banteux, and captured Gonnelieu, and Villers-Guislain. The enemy's counter-attacks at Gouzeaucourt collapsed.

We captured 4000 prisoners and several batteries.

A German official message on Friday afternoon stated:—Most violent artillery activity is manifested on both sides of Puchemelle and north of Gheluvelt. We repelled an English attack west of Bourlon.

THE LATEST COUP-DE-MAIN.

The latest German official message says: Strong English counter-attacks against the positions captured yesterday near Cambrai failed.

THE FRENCH FRONT.

A French communiqué issued on Friday afternoon stated:—After a series of violent bombardments in the region of Les Cambles, the enemy carried out an important raid, which completely failed.

A French communiqué on Friday night reported that the artillery was fairly active north of Chemin-des-Dames and on the right of the Meuse.

A French communiqué on Saturday afternoon stated:—The artillery duel increased on the right bank of the Meuse, and in the Beaumont-Bouleau Châlonne.

It was followed by a violent attack on positions north of Bois-d'Osse.

The assailants were driven back, after lively fighting, our line being entirely maintained.

A French communiqué on Saturday night reported violent artillery actions in the St. Quentin region, and south of Juvigny.

On the right of the Meuse we repulsed an enemy coup-de-main north west of Rezonvau.

THE GERMAN EFFORT.

Mr. Philip Gibbs writes: There was a violent German bombardment on Friday morning. Many gas shells preceded an elaborate assault on Bourlon Wood, which was repulsed, and arrested heavily.

The Germans have accepted General Byng's challenge for open warfare, which our men prefer.

These battles will be a great opportunity for generality.

The correspondent of the United Press Association, telegraphing on Friday, stated:—The enemy did not attempt to renew last night, their principal attack on the Cambrai battlefield. We successfully repelled local attacks southward of Vendhuile.

Hostile activity was active in the Scarpe Valley.

We drove off three attempted raids last night, southward of La Bassée, and carried out two successful raids in the neighbourhood of Waziers.

Sir Douglas Haig's midnight communiqué on Saturday stated: Reports from various sectors of the Cambrai battle front, with captured orders and objective maps, enable the following account to be given of the battle, which commenced yesterday morning, and is still progressing.

Sir Douglas Haig at noon on Saturday reported: The enemy did not attempt to renew last night, their principal attack on the Cambrai battlefield. We successfully repelled local attacks southward of Vendhuile.
